MISSOULA--

Daniel Foley, a prize-winning investigative reporter for the Lee Newspapers, will address the 22nd annual University of Montana Dean Stone Night journalism awards banquet May 21 at the Village Red Lion Motor Inn, Missoula.

Foley, 36, an investigative reporter for the Davenport (Iowa) Quad-City Times, worked for the Lee State Bureau from 1968 to 1972 and served as bureau chief in 1971 and 1972. He subsequently was the congressional correspondent for the Copley News Service in Washington, D.C.

In 1973 Foley won a first-place prize of $1,000 from the University of Missouri for a four-part series for the Lee Newspapers of Montana about the influence of corporate power in the state. He was cited by the American Political Science Association in 1970 and 1971 for "outstanding reporting of public affairs."

He has served three quarters as a visiting lecturer at the UM School of Journalism. A 1965 graduate of the school, he was editor of the Montana Kaimin in 1964 and 1965. He earned a master's degree in journalism at Northwestern University in 1966.

In 1972 Foley was named one of 15 Congressional Fellows in a national competition sponsored by the American Political Science Association. He worked for Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeir of Wisconsin and Sen. Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii.

While he was a student at UM, Foley worked one summer as editor of the Cut Bank Pioneer Press. He received scholarships from the Montana Press Association and the Great Falls Press Club, and in 1965 he was named the outstanding journalism graduate at UM.

He became interested in journalism as a student at Laurel High School, where
